

Visiting the Marine Education Center

The Marine Education Center is open to the public. Our center represents a small sampling of the wide variety of life found in the Long Island Sound. Our main centerpiece is our aquariums, which contain a wide variety of life found throughout Long Island Sound. The surrounding exhibits are informational connections based on life found in the aquariums and sound.

We look to inspire people of all ages to learn more about local marine life and ecology. Have fun understanding about the sea life and find out what lives in our harbor.

Volunteers Needed

You must be 14 and older and possess an interest in marine science! Space is limited.

About Us

The Marine Education Center is supported by people who share the common interest of developing programs, projects and exhibits related to the Village's unique Marine environment. Our facility now has multiple aquariums and a large touch tank stocked with animals from the harbor. Admission is free and information is suited to all age levels.

The Marine Education Center Naturalist is available all year for programs. The building is open April until early November from 9:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday.
